The Beet Sugar Industry

AT GRAND JUNCTION.

A Beet Sugar Factory has been constructed and is in full operation at Grand Junction, Colo. The Grand Valley proper now has under ditch 50,000 acres of land. Not to exceed  $\frac{1}{3}$  of this is now under cultivation. It is all well adapted for beet culture; this has been thoroughly demonstrated by car-loads of beets having been raised at different points in the Valley and shipped to a factory located at Lehi, Utah. Of these beets, the Utah Sugar Co., write. "They are very fine; we wish we had hundreds of car-loads like them." On the strength of these tests, extending over a number of years, capital is investing half a million of dollars in a plant at Grand Junction, Colorado. To be profitable, the factory must have beets. The people of Grand Valley have pledged themselves to raise not less than 3,500 acres of beets; to help do this they want hundreds of new families and settlers. There will be plenty of labor at good prices for every one willing to do an honest day's work. As an extra inducement to intending settlers, owners of 1,500 acres of land and the business men of Grand Junction have organized an association for the purpose of encouraging immigration, and are offering land and water free for this season to all who desire to settle in Grand Valley, and who will agree to engage in beet culture. There is no question regarding the fact that beet raising is a most profitable agricultural industry. The conditions in Grand Valley are identical with those of Lehi, Utah.

Regarding profit in beet raising perhaps we can do no better than to quote facts and figures from Lehi for 1898. There was planted for the Lehi factory, 3,200 acres of sugar beets. This acreage yielded 43,200 tons, or an average of  $13\frac{1}{2}$  tons per acre, which at \$4.25 per ton would mean \$57.50 per acre; allowing \$2.25 per acre for seed (furnished by factory and paid for out of crop) would leave a profit of \$55.25 per acre for the labor of the farmer who owns his own land or gets it rent free.

We wish every one to take particular notice of the fact that in addition to the advantage of soil and climate, such a thing as shortage of water is never known in Grand Valley, The Grand River carries more water than is needed for irrigating a million acres of land. Another thing. This is the banner fruit country of the West. We now have thousands of acres in orchards from which many owners have become independent. These men had nothing upon which to start and keep their families while the fruit trees were growing, but they succeeded, because, while the trees were young they planted berries and vegetables between the rows, and not only made a living, but a profit as well.

Write our committee, or W. F. Bailey, Gen. Pass. Agt., Colorado Midland Ry., and let them send you literature and answer any questions you may ask regarding soil, climate water, stock, schools, churches, beet factory, beet raising prevailing prices, transportation, etc.
