Hotel Strong, Strong, Maine

Situated on the State Road to Dead River and Rangeley regions. Newly furnished, broad piazza, excellent table. Steam heat, electric lights, etc.

One of the most inviting regions in the State of Maine, situated on the State Road to Dead River and Rangeley regions. Because of its natural allurements, its unparalleled scenery, its abundant fishing and hunting grounds, and its excellent hotel accommodations, this section has long been popular as a playground for the sportsman or tourist.

Exceptional opportunities are here offered for the location of manufacturing plants using forest products. Many prosperous industries are now located along the line of this railroad. The entire section is heavily wooded, its supply of hard wood especially being practically inexhaustible.

Rollin' into Kingfield

(Tune "Jingle Bells")

Rollin' into Kingfield on the Sandy River Line,
By the silvery river's brim, through the spruce and pine;
Buckin', snortin', twistin'—Oh boy, ain't it fine!
Rollin' into Kingfield on the Sandy River Line.

Steamin' like a kettle, as she climbs the ridge;
Purrin' like a pussycat, trundlin' 'cross the bridge;
Roarin' through the moonlit night—Oh boy, ain't it fine!
Rollin' into Kingfield on the Sandy River Line!

Rollin' into Kingfield through the deep white snows;
Hear the little engine sob as through the drift she ploughs,
Battlin' through to victory—Oh boy, ain't it fine!
Rollin' into Kingfield on the Sandy River Line!

Red-hot stoves a'cracklin', drummers' pipes a'pright,
Little lamps a'flarin' far into the night;
Happy, warm, and cozy—Oh boy, ain't it fine!
Rollin' into Kingfield on the Sandy River Line!

Take horse, or car, or steamboat, travel far away,
But the Sandy River Railroad o'er your heart holds sway;
And when once more you come back—Oh boy, ain't it fine!
Rollin' into Kingfield on the Sandy River Line!

—Charles G. Wilson, 1926.
